It will consist of two stories, 29 by 60, and will be ready for occupation shortly after April 1st. E. Mayall is having a house built near Walters mill on the Strathcona side of the river. It is a one story frame, 30 by 24, with a lean-to, Chas May is the contractor.

—One of the latest calendars to arrive but at the same time one of the prettiest has just been left at this office by the Great West Land Company. The picture represents a very pretty rural scene. In the foreground is a little girl in the act of feeding a hen and chickens—her favorites.

SCOTTISH CONCERT
The Jessie McLaughlin concert last night was received by a crowded house. The name and fame of the singer, and still more the inspiration of her songs, were the attractions, and no one was disappointed. Her clear, strong, voice was at its best in "Ran's Britannia," but it was sweeter in the Gaelic songs. Although Miss McLaughlin's spoken English is very precise, there is no question that the Gaelic is her native and more familiar language. In consideration of her very Scottish audience Miss McLaughlin varied from the programme by giving two beautiful Scottish songs in the place of "The Holy City" and "Constantly." Almost every number was encored. Miss Dean is a very pleasing violinist. All her numbers except the first were encored. Her imitation of the bag pipes on the violin was extraordinarily good. Mr. Buchanan gave a piano solo and played the accompaniments very acceptably.

ACCOMMODATION FOR IMMIGRANTS

With the rush of people already commencing while the snow is still deep on the ground, the question is brought prominently forward: What is to be done for the temporary shelter of the thousands who may reasonably be expected later on? Hotel accommodation is already taxed to its utmost capacity, and in any case the incoming immigrant with a family cannot afford to pay hotel bills even for a short time. Nor is it desirable that his small stock of money should be used up in that way. Means have been taken to provide temporary accommodation for immigrants by the provision or rental of buildings for that purpose at various points. But it now appears that accommodation already provided will be absolutely inadequate to take care of the rush; nor is there time to erect buildings. The people are already on their way, and something should be done to meet them with at least temporary shelter on their arrival. There is only one way in which this can be done, and that is by providing a large number of tents at each railway point, proportionate to the probable number of incoming people. Where those tents are to be is another question? The immigration department does not own any sufficient number, and probably a sufficient number could not be made in time. There is only one way in which the necessity can be met, and that is by the immigration department borrowing from the militia department a sufficient number of army tents; which could be repaired or returned by the time they would be required for the summer camp. The matter is one of extreme urgency and red tape or departmental etiquette should not be allowed to stand in the way of meeting it creditably. The best money that is expended on immigration is that spent in smoothing over the difficulties necessarily arising on the first arrival of the immigrant and his family in the country. It will be the greatest mistake the immigration department ever made, if when things are coming our way they take for granted that further consideration of the welfare of the settlers is not needed.

FREIGHT HANDLERS' STRIKE

The strike of freight handlers of the Canadian Pacific railway has come to be a very serious matter in western Canada. The length of time taken under ordinary circumstances to bring in freight is a sufficient difficulty in business without the addition of entire uncertainty as to how long the freight will be on the road. The grain blockade which prevented produce from going out was bad, but the freight handlers' strike is preventing supplies from coming in, and the climax, and makes the tie up complete. In both cases the railway company is the party in the transaction which can best afford to take matters coolly. If the grain does not come forward now it will be there for another time, and if the goods which were ordered months ago do not get into the consignee's hands at the time expected, they will arrive later on, and the freight will be collectable all the same. The strikers may lose, but the public will certainly lose, but the railway company does not stand to lose whatever happens. Herein lies the difference between a strike on the railway, and a strike in any other line of industry, especially where the railway is a monopoly as is the C. P. R. in the Northwest. And right here is a point which may be very well taken against a continuance of that monopoly. If there were another railway company operating in the Northwest, the C. P. R. would be financially affected by the strike and therefore would take means to prevent it. But as they are situated at present they can very well afford to lead calmly on the tie up of traffic and say: "It is not our loss any way." What the merits of the quarrel between the C. P. R. and its freight handlers may be are not generally understood. Possibly the railway is not to blame, and possibly all the blame rests upon it. More than likely there is blame on both sides, but whether it is on the one side or the other it does not affect the result to the community, and for that result the company not its employees are responsible. It has come to be a very serious question just how far the railway company can be permitted to tie up the traffic of the country because they have a disagreement with their employees. They have had strikes or threatened strikes from almost every branch of their service, and it can hardly be supposed that in every case the company was free from blame. In any case the country should have recourse against the company which holds a monopoly of a certain service. If the company cannot fulfill its contract with the public, it and not the public should certainly be the loser.

THE TARIFF DEMANDS

There is no question that that combine of combines the Canadian manufacturers' association is in deadly earnest in its campaign for a prohibitive tariff. On March 18th, on the day of the opening of parliament, a meeting of the association was held in Toronto, at which over three hundred members were present. The meeting was strictly private. This is one advantage that the manufacturers have in pushing their campaign, they can act as one man, and no one but themselves need know what their plans are. There is no doubt as to the purpose of the meeting. It was to make final arrangements for bringing pressure to bear on parliament at the session now in progress, but what form that pressure is to take, no one outside the association knows. It does not appear that there is any division amongst the manufacturers on political lines. They are simply out for the stuff, and the so-called liberals amongst them are using their party name for the purpose of advancing the joint designs of themselves and their political opponents.

While there is an uncertainty as to how the manufacturers association is going to work, there is no uncertainty about the purpose to be achieved. A prohibitive tariff is the target aimed at. Nothing short of that will be esteemed satisfactory. That being the case the people, and those who are for the moment charged with administering their affairs, may just as well make up their minds first as last, what are they going to do about the demand to be made. There is no use temporizing with an impossibility. The manufacturers are demanding what the country cannot concede and live. Nothing else will satisfy them, therefore there is no use trying to satisfy them, by giving them anything else. Unless the government and the liberal party is prepared to accept the responsibility of introducing and working out a prohibitive tariff, it must accept the hostility of the manufacturers' association. If concessions are made to such an unreasonable demand it will certainly alienate a considerable proportion of the present supporters of the government and party. Enough of tampering with the tariff with the view of pleasing the manufacturers has been done to seriously discount a large proportion of those engaged in the great producing industries. By failing to reduce the tariff to a purely revenue basis, the government has lost more friends than it has gained. In fact its losses have not been compensated for by any gain. So far from that, indeed, that after the government having prejudiced itself in the eyes of its low tariff supporters its reward as far as political support is concerned, is the demand made by the conservatives and liberals of that association that it shall do what is slowly and plainly wrong on the mere ground that the country can stand it and therefore probably will.

Whatever else there may be in the discussion now going on, the fact of the present demands being made and the reasons given for them, sufficiently disproves the argument made by the opponents of the government at last election that the tariff reductions had been ineffectual and were of no practical value to the consumer or to the great producing industries generally. The very ground work and basis of the demand for tariff increase is the reduction in prices of certain important lines as the result of the British preference. The preference is the stickler with the manufacturers, and according to the statement made by one of them who attended the recent meeting in Toronto, while they do not want to abolish the British preference in name, they want the tariff raised so that even with a preference on British goods they will have more protection than before '96. The friends of the government offering as candidates in the election of 1900 were in grave danger of being whipsawed between the manufacturers who were displeased because the tariff reductions had been made and the farmers who were disappointed because while the manufacturers' association are doing everything in their power to prevent the possibility of such a game being worked at the next election their able efforts should be seconded by the government introducing such tariff amendments as would leave no question in the public mind as to its policy being low tariff. It was very well in '96 to experiment in an effort to satisfy the manufacturers and give justice to the public. As one part of the experiment has turned out a total failure, the other part might as well be pushed to complete success.

MEN'S CLOTHING

Men's Suits, some new ones. Just about now you'll be glad to see some distinctly new goods, fresh ideas in the way of fabrics—large plaids, broken checks, narrow stripes in brown and gray effects—in fancy chevrons. The man who wants something "a little different" will appreciate the present showing of

PICCADILLY CLOTHING

There is a difference in clothing as in men. There are no better clothes made than those we are showing, but there are higher prices. A hot iron and a ton weight can press out a poorly made suit so that it looks very fine in a window. But only good, careful tailoring and all wool cloth can make a suit hold its shape and look well for months and months. No need to argue with yourself, even though you have a good suit or overcoat. Will not another be welcome, if it's but to relieve a monotonous sameness? Many of these suits are of medium weight, and you could not find better for spring service. They are all identified by the "PICCADILLY" label. That makes them all the more desirable.

A good address goes a long way in aiding a man to forge to the front. We materially assist in giving you a presentable appearance by furnishing fashionable cut attire at prices below tailor made. Elegant patterns, careful workmanship. No clothing fits like ours.

STRATHCONA

Plaindealer, March 20.
Rev. C. C. McLaurin, general missionary of the Baptist denomination was in Strathcona on Tuesday.

David Williams arrived this week from South Wales and has leased A. Davies' farm east of town for the coming season.

Alphonse St. Hilliers and Joseph Desrosiers arrived this week with their families from Sherbrooke, Quebec, and will locate on farm lands in this district.

The family of Mr. Wallace Hood residing just west of Strathcona has been deeply afflicted during the last few months through the fatal visitations of scarlet fever. Since the new year three members of the family have died from it and another lies at the point of death. Last Saturday evening Mr. Hood's daughter Jane, four-year-old, succumbed to the fell disease. The stricken family have the heartfelt sympathy of the community in their distress.

R. Burgess and family of Salisbury settlement left yesterday for England where they will reside in future. On Monday evening a large number of friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. Burgess gathered at their home to give them a farewell party. They were royally entertained and a most enjoyable evening was spent. Mr. Burgess came to Salisbury settlement from England ten years ago and has been most successful in his farming operations. He has disposed of his property here to good advantage and now returns to the old land where he believes he can invest his savings profitably.

CONJURING CREEK

Scholarly weather.
Sighing about done for. This has been the best winter in many years; especially for sleighing.

Lumber is on the boom at the creek now. Mr. McMillan, of Strathcona, has been saving almost all winter, about 12 miles west of here, at Strawberry Creek, and has now moved here to the post office ground where about 100,000 feet is waiting to be saved. R. T. Telford, of Leduc, has been rushing his sawing all winter at Conjuring Lake.

Settlers will continue to come in but are going farther back, as there is no more vacant land here now, except a few C. P. R. quarters which have been picked over.

It is with deep regret we learn that Mr. Frank Clifford, through ill-health is leaving the creek. He will certainly be greatly missed, being one of the creek's early settlers. He always had the welfare of the creek at heart. He was an industrious farmer, and since being here has held office as fire and game guardian, and school trustee. But our loss will be other's gain wherever he settles.

Mr. Richards, who has been away on a visit, returns the 1st of next month. Mr. Swartz is visiting at Strathcona.

Miss Lawson, of Strawberry Creek school, has been engaged to teach at the Humble school to start 1st of April.

Conjuring Creek school reopens 1st April.

Miss Alpaugh is visiting friends at Clearwater.

We regret to learn that our pastor Rev. A. McDonald has been taken sick again.

Services will be held on Sunday next by Rev. Scott, of Leduc, at Humble school, at 2 p. m., and at the Conjuring Creek school by Rev. Lloyd, of Strathcona, at 11 a. m., March 30, '03.
